Parents' Bulletin

Dear Parents

If you are familiar with snapchat and most of our students are, you may know that they have introduced a map feature that allows users to track other peoples' movements, in real time.

This is if users allow others to do so and they can select all of their friends, some of them, or none at all (ghost mode). It strikes me that this feature could be troublesome if a student has fallen out with someone, acquaintance or ex-friend. The details of the map, I am told although cannot confirm, allows people to be located down to a building.

I would suggest that some parental advice on the matter is appropriate. Certainly I would suggest not including all "friends" and if some are selected, a regular review would be wise. Given that someone who had been deselected might not manage such a situation well after such a review, I'd go for 'ghost' mode as the easiest option. But then I am not 13 (the stated age limit for snapchat) and so sensitive to peer pressure.

Sports Day

The weather was kind to us – patchy sun light and not too hot. The event was held next to the Science block, impossible last year with all the temporary huts there. It is a natural arena, surrounded by hedges and a building. The students behaviour was fantastic – a teacher new to us this year commented that the students from their previous school would never have coped with the event so well. Ours were in good voice supporting their House and there were some fantastic individual performances. In the end Wilberforce triumphed, winning the House cup and Mrs Williams the Head of House, was absolutely thrilled. Our thanks go to all the competitors, who tried extremely hard, to the rest of the students for their support and to the PE department who organised and ran it brilliantly.

The prom that evening was excellent too. The vehicles delivering the students ranged from Rolls Royce and Bentleys, through to stretch limos, vintage cars, VW camper vans, a couple on their micro scooters, three Mustangs of varying ages, an American army truck, a Ford Granada police car from the 80s, or maybe 70s, a very low gull wing door sports car of unknown (to me) make and a host of other smart and no doubt expensive cars. The Hall was decorated to the highest standard I have seen, with the theme 'The Enchanted Forest' so lots of greenery and fairy toadstools and as usual, embarrassing photo-shopped pictures. The students were very appreciative and went off to their after prom parties happy.

We had superb support from various local businesses SS Floral who are based in Yateley who donated many props and time to help set everything up, Debbie Clark Parties Galore who did the balloons again for us this year, Henry Street Garden Centre for the loan of props and DJ Wadge. Thank you also to Mr Matt Davis and all of the caretakers.

Hampshire
County Council

Mrs D'Alton and Miss Hinks did their usual sterling job of arranging the whole event with the support of students and other staff this year, they surpassed themselves.

Matters Educational

The new Head of Ofsted, Amanda Spielman, has criticised schools that turn themselves into exam factories rather than offering a well-rounded education. She said "that school leaders should be ashamed of some of the tactics used to bolster their league table standings".

Extraordinary, but welcome. Ofsted inspectors have, however, focussed so intently on exam results that it is hardly surprising that schools have tried to be as successful as they can be in the league tables arena. We were criticised in the last inspection for not having enough students studying for the Ebacc. The fact that no-one asks for it or requires it (or for the most part, cares about it) did not matter as it is a measure in the league tables. If Ms Spielman is serious in her intent, this can only be good. However, it is not a view that the Department of Education, nor Ofsted inspectors themselves, have supported.

As a result of the recent election, Grammar schools seem to have gone the way of the dementia tax and thank heavens for that. Divisive and unfair to the point of discrimination they should never have been resurrected and let's hope this is the end of that proposal.

Holidays in term time

The case of Jon Platt who refused to pay a fine for taking his child on holiday during term time seems to have finally come to an end. His case was that his daughter's good attendance meant that, even with a week's holiday, she attended school regularly as required by law. This was supported in the magistrates and then the High Court. A surge in term time holiday bookings apparently followed the latter.

However, the Supreme Court decided that Mr Platt had shown 'a blatant disregard of school rules' and that his approach had been a 'slap in the face' to obedient parents who abide by the law. He was fined £2,000. This is in addition to his estimated £12,000 legal costs.

Mr Platt absolutely believes in the rights of parents to make decisions about their children and if this is the case, you have to admire his persistence and determination. However, we see each day the effects that bad parental decisions can have on some students, many unwitting or unavoidable, some wilful and selfish. There will always be a point at which other agencies have to step in for the greater good of such children.

ECDL

This stands for the European Computer Driving License. We canvassed parents of year 11 to see if they would support this additional qualification and the large majority of parents who answered were in favour.

In the end 201 Year 11 students sat it, 181 received distinction stars – the equivalent of an A*, 18 distinctions (A) and 2 merits (B). Looking at the outstanding results, some might conclude that this was an easy qualification. Other, more glass half full, might conclude that this was an excellent outcome base on 5 years of through ICT teaching.

Maths Corner 35

Jill's House → Jack and Jill ← Jack's House

Jack and Jill live 88 miles apart. Jack travels at 10 miles per hour from his house to Jill's. Jill travels at 12 miles per hour from her house to Jack's. If both set out at midday and they take the same route, what time will it be when they meet? How far away from Jill's house will they be?

1 house point to all parents/students who presents the correct answer to their maths teacher before next weeks Maths Corner is published.

Answer to Maths Corner 34 – Same Area

a = 4cm, b = 12cm, c = 6cm

FREE FOOTBALL

A free football scheme to develop the potential of young people in the borough will be funded for a second year. Working with Reading Football Club and Hampshire Constabulary, the borough council set up and runs Kicks – a new and exciting initiative for 11 to 19 years.

Sessions take place every Tuesday at Everest Community Academy in Oxford Way, teenagers are encouraged to simply turn up and play. For more information please contact:

BOYS ONLY! DANCE WEEKEND AT THE POINT

We have an exciting opportunity here at The Point for any aspiring male dancers aged 8-18 years, suitable for beginners and those with some dance experience in any style.

Boys Only! In partnership with Royal Academy of Dance, is a high-energy, two-day workshop full of creativity, led by experienced male teachers. Bring a friend and enjoy energising contemporary warm-up classes and creative dance sessions combined with athletic ballet classes to build your coordination, strength and alignment. Classes are led by male teachers alongside dancers from the all-male Zoie Logic Dance Theatre.

The weekend finishes with a presentation for parents and guardians, and a Q&A with your teachers.

This event is being held at The Point, Saturday 8 & Sunday 9 July - 10am – 4.30pm each day (students are required to attend both days). The cost of the weekend is just £53.00.

Booking deadline has been extended, so please do encourage any dancers that might be interested to book on as soon as possible. Bookings can be made on the RAD website:
